

The background of the entire image is a dense, organic marbled pattern. It features a mix of dark charcoal, black, and grey tones, with lighter, almost white, veins and patches. The pattern is irregular and fluid, resembling natural stone or a high-quality marble effect.

Surface and texture

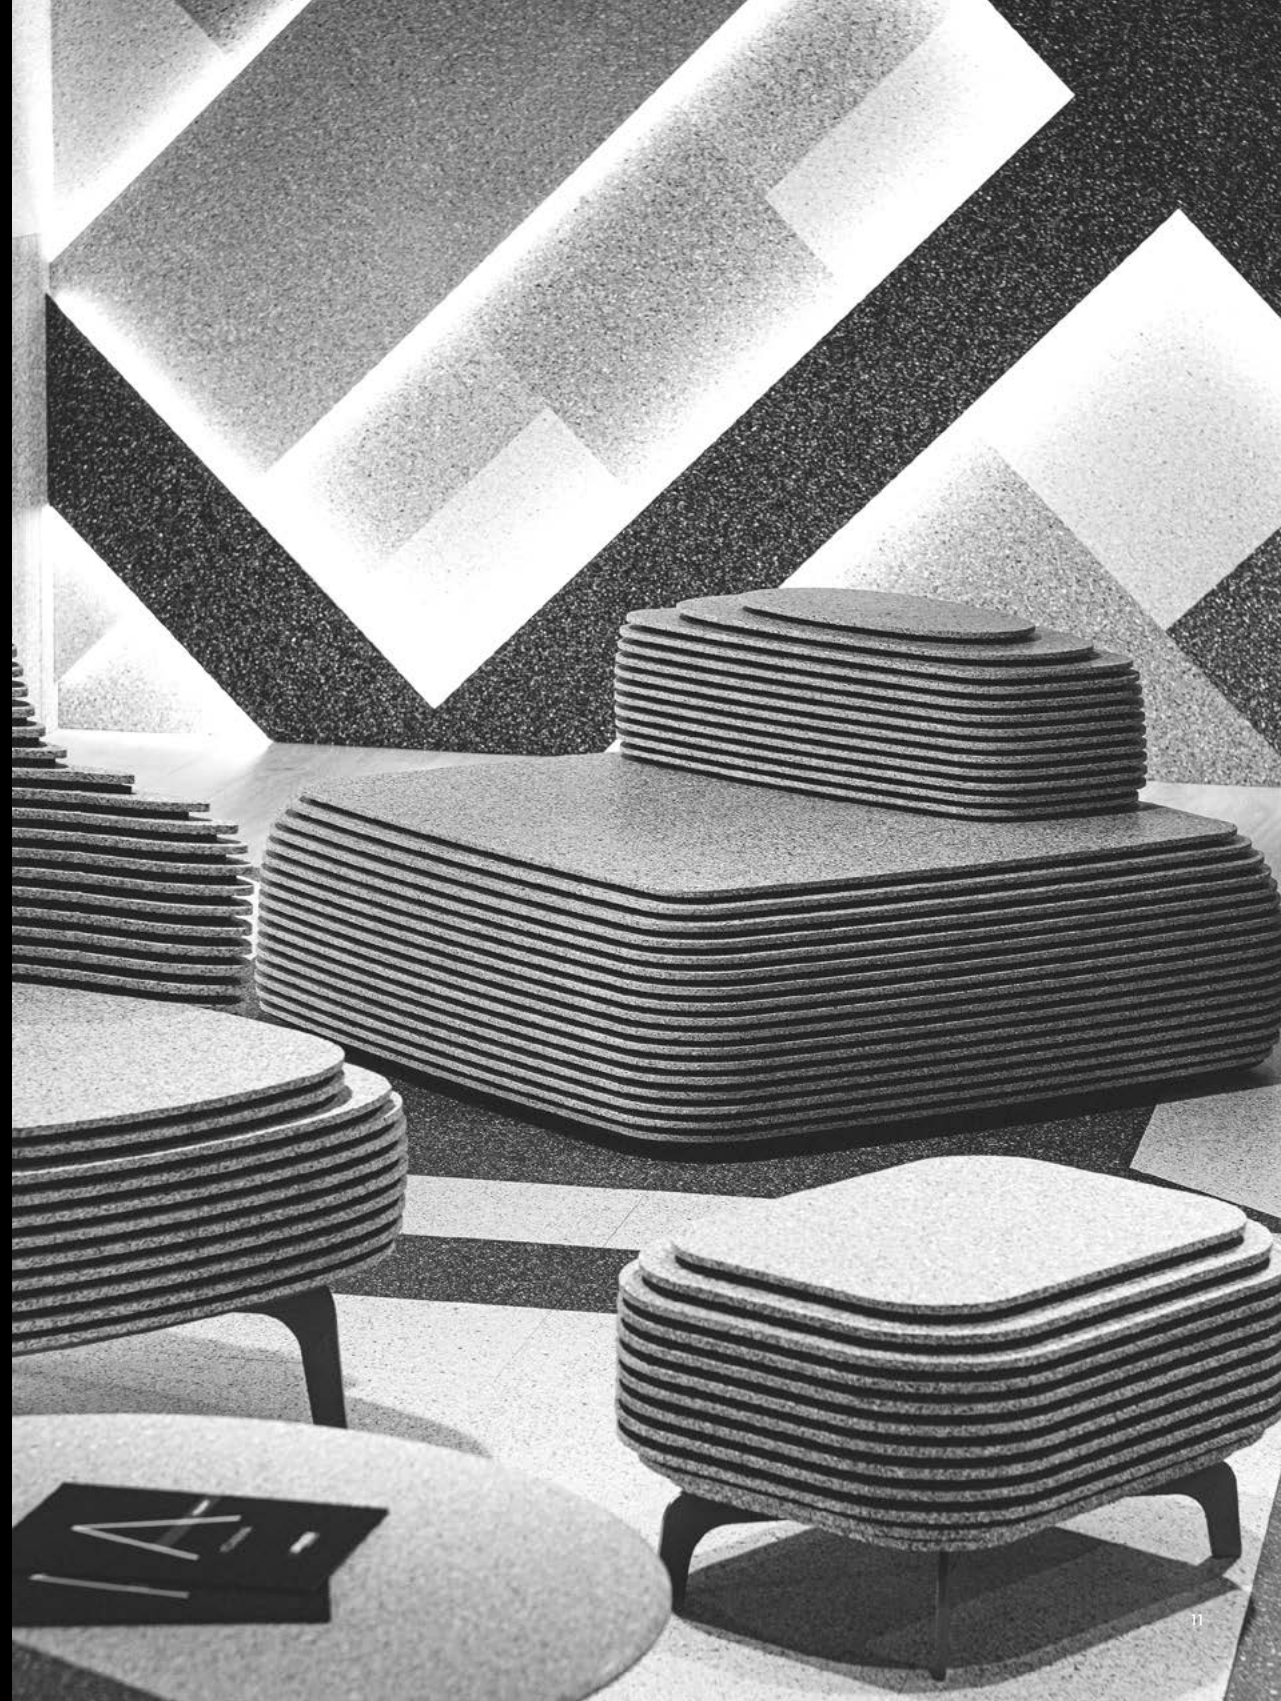

Throughout history the principle building material has been stone. As construction techniques evolved, the requirement for stone to provide structural strength diminished, and a new case for its use was required.

The desire to create timeless forms and meaningful spaces remained, and a new material that could deliver light and shade, advance and recess, and surface and texture started to emerge. Through constant innovation, the Porcelain Tiles Stone Collection celebrates the dislocation of form and function and keeps pace with the increasing demands of our architectural clients.

And with exceptional quality and craftsmanship in every detail, from the perfectly mitred edges to the beautifully integrated surfaces, they can be confident that each item will delight, not only on the day they leave the TAILOR-MADE⁺ studio, but for many years to come.

Finishing touches

To ensure that each project is as unique as its creator, many of the surfaces within our Stone Collection are offered in a choice of finishes.

- From the contemporary softness of Honed finish, the authenticity of Natural, the spectacular shine of Polished or the practicality of Grip, each one displays a personality all of its own and provides you with fine control over the visual impact of your unique design. Perfection in every detail.
